Turnaround School Leaders Program

The University of Florida Lastinger Center for Learning will work over a four-month period (March 1-June 30, 2016) to complete a customization of its existing Coaching Academy program for implementation among Colorado principals and teachers in K-12 schools that have received the “Turnaround” distinction. The project team will conduct a site visit to Colorado to meet with key state and school district leadership to conduct discovery on the necessary adaptations of the program that has been successfully implemented in a large number of school districts in Florida. These customizations will include working with a videographer to produce Colorado-specific classroom and school footage that can be used within the program as well as within the recruitment of participating school districts and schools.
