

Project EASE

Econometric Analysis in Special Education

University of Florida
Fully Funded Ph.D.
in Special Education

Project EASE is a Special Education Ph.D. program that sits at the crossroads of special education, education policy, and literacy instruction and intervention. Scholars will take a deep dive into special education policymaking, addressing pressing special education and literacy issues by leveraging myriad data and analytic tools to connect results to public policy and make sound recommendations for policy change.

Project EASE scholars will work closely with faculty from the UF Education Policy Research Center and the UF Literacy Institute to develop three areas of expertise:

- Special education legal and policy knowledge
- Rigorous research methods to study policies and practices within special education and literacy
- Effective teacher development methods to disseminate special education and literacy policy knowledge and recommendations

Program begins Fall 2022

Application deadline is December 1, 2021

GRE Required

Questions? Email
Dr. Christopher Redding
c.redding@coe.ufl.edu

Scholar Support:

Full tuition for 4 years

$33,500 per year for living expenses

$3,000 per year for conference travel

$1,000 per year for expenses (e.g., books)

$2,500 dissertation research support